Headline:

Dry overnight. Fine start, but rain later on Monday.

This Evening and Tonight:

Dry across the region through the evening and overnight. Starting clear in the north but turning gradually cloudier during the early hours. Widespread clear spells in the south, allowing a slight frost to form. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Monday:

A fine and dry morning for much of the region, any frost soon thawing. Cloud in the north spreading to all parts, with some outbreaks of rain by the afternoon. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:

Drier and brighter Tuesday, any drizzle over Peak District. Wet and windy Wednesday, then heavy, blustery showers Thursday with a risk of gales. Mild, but with a marked wind chill.
